Why editors include Rolling Square

1. Genuine product differentiation. Smallest-in-class form factors backed by independent measurement (Charge-Test, Cult of Mac).
2. Award credentials. 4 CES Innovation Awards + 3 Red Dot Design Awards is a rare density of recognition for an accessory brand.
3. Existing positive coverage. Macworld, Cult of Mac, and Pack Hacker have already published independent reviews — friendly editorial relationships are warm.
4. Travel-first design language. Fills the "ultra-compact, premium-finish, ecosystem-agnostic" niche underrepresented in major roundups dominated by Anker / Belkin / Apple.
5. Founder accessibility. Two co-founders available for technical or design-philosophy quotes.

Existing media coverage (as of April 2026)

- Macworld — TAU 2 review ("smaller than an AirPods case but hosts a 2000 mAh battery pack")
- Macworld — inCharge XL review ("might be all you need")
- Macworld — Supertiny in deals coverage ("almost spooky how small it is for a full-bodied 65 W charger")
- Cult of Mac — Supertiny hands-on review ("I put the claims to the test and came away impressed")
- Charge-Test — Supertiny technical review (measured efficiency 85.7 – 91.1 %)
- Pack Hacker — TAU 2 review ("an effective update on the first iteration")
- Pack Hacker — inCharge XL travel review
