

Outreach Email — Macworld (Warm)

Status: Warm contact — Simon Jary has previously reviewed the TAU 2 and the inCharge XL.

Target: Simon Jary, Reviews Editor / Senior Writer at Macworld (former Editor of Macworld with 30+ years of experience). Target articles (two-pronged pitch): -

<https://www.macworld.com/article/668978/best-magsafe-portable-battery-packs-and-power-banks-for-iphone-12-and-13.html> — MagSafe portable battery roundup (5 AI citations, 5.0 avg per answer — highest density in cluster) - <https://www.macworld.com/article/668980/best-magsafe-chargers.html> — MagSafe chargers roundup - And/or any "best iPhone charger" or GaN charger roundup he's working on.

Best timing: Within 1-2 months — Macworld refreshes the MagSafe roundup quarterly, last updated Feb 2026.

Subject line options (A/B)

- A. Following up on the TAU 2 review — and a Supertiny update for your roundups
- B. TAU 2 in your MagSafe battery roundup? + Supertiny review unit if useful
- C. Hi Simon — TAU 2 fit for your portable battery list, plus iPhone 17 Supertiny data

Recommended: Option A. References his existing review by name (warm hook), signals two distinct asks, doesn't oversell.

Email body

Hi Simon,

Hope you're well. Following up on your TAU 2 review last year — the "smaller than an AirPods case" framing genuinely landed; we still get reader DMs referencing it.

Two quick things, both with Macworld in mind.

- 1) Your "Best MagSafe Portable Battery Packs" roundup is one of the best-cited Apple-accessory roundups out there. The TAU 2 doesn't currently appear in it, but it fits the "emergency / keyring / always with you" slot that nothing else in the lineup really covers. We have updated specs since your original review:

- 2,000 mAh, 49 g (lighter than an AirPods Pro case)
- USB-C + Lightning + Micro-USB built into the body
- Magnetic charging dock — auto-tops-up when you put your keys down

- iPhone 16 / 17 compatibility verified

If you want to slot it in, happy to send an updated unit with structured comparison data formatted to match your existing table.

- 2) Separately – if you're refreshing the iPhone charger or GaN coverage at any point: the Supertiny 65W has independent test data that wasn't available when you covered it in the deals piece. Charge-Test measured 85.7–91.1 % efficiency, and we benchmarked it at 28 W to iPhone 16 Plus and 57–60 W sustained to a MacBook Air. It's also 22 % smaller by volume than the Anker Nano II 65W. Standalone review or roundup – whatever works for your editorial calendar.

Both products' updated press kits attached. Always great to work with you.

Best,

Personalization checklist (before sending)

- [] Verify Simon's email address (Macworld contact page or LinkedIn — Future plc emails follow `firstname_lastname@futurenet.com` or `firstname.lastname@idg.com`).
- [] Confirm his recent TAU 2 review URL — paste it inline if you want to make the warm hook concrete: "Following up on your TAU 2 review last year (link)."
- [] If Macworld has changed since the review (new section editor, etc.), adjust accordingly.
- [] Check the MagSafe roundup's `last updated` date the day before sending — adjust the framing if it was just refreshed.
- [] Include a real signature with full PR contact info.

What to attach / link

1. `02-supertiny-spec-sheet.md` → PDF.
2. `03-comparison-table.md` → PDF.
3. TAU 2 updated spec sheet — needs creation, parallel to the Supertiny spec sheet, with the iPhone 16/17 compatibility note.
4. `assets/supertiny-size-comparison.png` — inline if HTML
5. Charge-Test report — link or PDF.

6. Past Macworld review URLs (TAU 2, inCharge XL, Supertiny deals piece) — paste as references for context.

Follow-up cadence

- Day 0: Send.
- Day 5: Lighter follow-up than for cold outreach — Simon is a known contact; one polite nudge is enough.
- Day 14: If no response, switch to LinkedIn DM with a single-line ask.
- Day 30: Move to monitoring — re-pitch when the MagSafe roundup gets refreshed.

Why this is the highest-leverage email in the kit

The Macworld MagSafe portable battery roundup has the highest citation density of any editorial URL in the cluster — 5.0 citations per AI answer when used. A single inclusion is worth more than getting added to 3 mid-tier outlets. Combined with the warm relationship (Simon already trusts the brand and has shipped positive reviews), the probability of conversion is high.

Success signals

1. "Send it over" → ship updated TAU 2 + Supertiny review units within 48 hours, BCC tracking.
2. Counter-pitch ("would you do a standalone Supertiny review instead?") → say yes, that's a stronger asset than a roundup line.
3. Editorial calendar share ("I'll be looking at this in March") → schedule outreach reminder.

What "win" looks like (90 days)

- ☒ TAU 2 added to the MagSafe portable battery roundup as the "best emergency / keyring" pick.
- ☒ Supertiny standalone review or inclusion in a 2026 charger roundup.
- ☒ Pattern 2 description language (04-brand-positioning-ai-optimized.md) makes it into the body copy.
- ☒ Affiliate link active.
